Canada

- The S&P/TSX Composite increased 0.16% on the week, led by the Energy sector, which saw an increase of 3.78%.
- As was universally expected, the Bank of Canada made no changes or tweaks to its accommodative policy stance in last week's interest announcement, keeping its overnight policy rate target at its "effective lower bound" of 0.25% (where it has been since March 27) and maintaining its current pace of asset purchases of "at least $4 billion per week" (the Bank of Canada's balance sheet has expanded by more than C$400 billion or +340% since the quantitative easing program was launched on March 27).

United States

- The S&P/500 Composite decreased 0.96% on the week.
- More than 947,000 workers filed new claims for state unemployment benefits last week according to the Labor Department. Applications have now risen three times in the last four weeks, and are up nearly a quarter-million since the first week of November. Nearly 428,000 applied for Pandemic Unemployment Assistance, a federal program that covers freelancers, self-employed workers and others who don't qualify for regular state benefits. That figure was also a sharp increase from the previous week.
